RESORT INCEPTION

The land where Nemaocolin Woodlands Resort now sits has a long history dating back to 1740, when a rugged trail was carved through the Laurel Highlands between what is now Cumberland, Maryland and Brownsville, Pennsylvania. The trailblazer was native Delaware Indian Chief, Nemaocolin. Assisted by frontiersman, Thomas Cresap, the trail was the most directed route from east to west. Later expanded by Colonel George Washington and General Edward Braddock during the French and Indian War, the trail eventually became known as the National High Way by Congress in the mid-1800s. Today, that road is called Route 40, the major mountain artery where Nemaocolin Woodlands Resort now sits.

By the early 1900s, the Laurel Highlands became a popular and fashionable retreat for wealthy Pittsburgh industrialists and merchants. At the same time vacation retreats, such as the Kaufman family's Frank Lloyd Wright designed Fallingwater were being built, Nemaocolin was also being minimally developed. During the 1930s, lots were established and offered for sale as summer homes and hunting retreats.

In 1949, Pittsburgh industrialist, Willard F. Rockwell (Rockwell International), purchased 60 acres here in the Laurel Highlands. Over the next several years, he added land, and in 1968 established a private game reserve on what is now Nemaocolin Woodlands Resort. This property was named Nemaocolin Trails Hunting Reserve. The Rockwell's invited friends and business associates to hunt and fish the 400-acre reserve, populated by silver fox, bear and white-tailed deer. A hunting lodge was constructed in 1968, designed by Rockwell's friend and former college roommate, C.W. Balling, of nearby Fairchance, Pennsylvania. The 10-room Tudor lodge was quickly expanded to 33 rooms, which were all decorated by Mrs. Rockwell. The Lodge, together with a golf course, tennis court, airstrip, and lakes Louise and Carol were also added, while Beaver Creek was developed into the excellent trout stream it is today.

The property was sold in 1979 to Cordelia Mellon Scaife, and became an exclusive conference center. Three years later, the property returned to the Rockwell Family. Kent Rockwell, Willard's son, purchased the conference center and opened it to the public. In the years immediately following, the Maples and Laurel Ponds townhouses and a number of private homes were established on the estate. Rockwell also added the first outdoor pool (now the Kidz Pool) and the resorts first restaurant, The Golden Trout, which was located where the Club Room is today.

In 1987, Joseph A. Hardy, III, founder of the 84 Lumber Company, purchased a large portion of the Nemaocolin property at auction (550 acres) – an auction he attended in the hopes of purchasing a few acres of woodlands near a lake or stream for his daughter, Maggie, who loved fishing. As Hardy recounts, "I left the auction without that piece of property for fishing because I bought the main parcel and was out of money." Hardy and his daughter, Maggie, promptly set about transforming the property into its present state – a 2,000 acre world-class resort, rated Four-Stars by the prestigious Forbes Travel Guide and Four-Diamonds by the American Automobile Association (AAA). In 2002, Hardy transferred full ownership of the resort to his daughter, Maggie Hardy Magerko, who still serves as President and Owner, and continues to grow the resort. Today Nemaocolin is proud home to Forbes Five-Star, AAA Five-Diamond lodging and dining at Falling Rock Hotel and Lautrec Restaurant.
